IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Friends Learn of Henning-de Charette Engagement.

TO WED MARQUIS OF FRANCE

Distinguished Member of French Nobility Wins Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Henning, of Shelbyville, Ky.—Both Are Well Known in the City of Washington.

The engagement of Miss Susanne Henning, of Louisville, Ky., to the Marquis Antoine de Charette, of Paris, as announced from Louisville, is of special interest in Washington. Miss Henning is an intimate friend of Miss Evie Morgan, of this city, and has visited her many times during the season. Only last winter, Miss Henning and the Marquis were Miss Morgan's guests, and were elaborately entertained here. The Marquis' mother was also in the party and they were dinner guests of the French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand during their visit. Miss Henning is now abroad with her aunt, Miss Henning, and they have been in Paris for some time, from where the announcement was first made. Miss Henning is not only a beauty, but an heiress, and a charming, cultivated girl. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Henning, who have a large country estate near Shelbyville, Ky., and Miss Henning divides her time between there and the home of her grandmother Henning in Louisville, where she was presented to society several seasons ago in a series of brilliant functions. The Marquis has spent considerable time in Kentucky, where he has many relatives and friends, and where his mother also visited with him last winter. His mother was a granddaughter of Bishop Polk, of Tennessee, who met his death on the field of battle during the civil war. The Marquis also has relatives in Philadelphia, in the family of Mr. George H. Earle, the financier, and the former Mrs. Dundas Lippincott and Mrs. Edward H. Coates, all of whom he visited many times. He was the guest of the last named at "The Belgrave" several times, and was a member of the famous family of the old French regime, being descended from King Charles X, as well as from the American Polks, which gave a President to the United States.

He gained distinction as a fighter in the Boer ranks against the English in the South African war. Associated with him then were a number of others of the French nobility, headed by Prince Louis of Orleans, younger son of Gaston d'Orleans, Comte d'Artois, and his consort, the crown princess of Brazil. The Marquis is very amiable in his manner and polished, and was voted a "good fellow" by all the men who met him at the various clubs here and in Philadelphia, where he was entertained. His father, Gen. de Charette, was long a conspicuous figure in Europe, and was for some time an officer of the Pontifical Zouaves. The late Comte de Charette was an uncle of Gen. Charette, and they were descended from the unfortunate Louis XVI, whom the revolutionists guillotined. The name of de Charette is a familiar one to all acquaintances with French history. The family to-day is revered not only in Brittany, where the deeds of one of its greatest heroes still are told in story and song, but throughout France where he is remembered as a hero who saved the late Comte de Chambord was rightfully the King of France, and who never refer to him except as Henry V.

The Marquis de Charette has long courted the Kentucky belle, and the announcement of the engagement is no surprise to their friends. It is believed that the wedding will take place in Kentucky in the early winter. Miss Henning's hand has been sought by distinguished suitors of the South and East, but all to no avail, and it was believed for a long time that the Marquis would share the same fate. Miss Henning and her aunt have been joined in France by her father, and they have been entertained by the family of the Marquis.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl.
By HELEN ROWLAND.
Love is a disease—but cheer up! Nowadays there is nothing chronic about it.

Homeless carriages, fireless cookers, and iceless refrigerators have proved such a success that it remains only for some genius to invent a "husbandless marriage" in order to make modern life perfectly happy.

A man is something like a cat—no matter how many times he is thrown over, he always lands comfortably on his feet, and walks off cheerfully at his escape.

When a man shows presence of mind in love-making, it is a sure sign of absence of heart.

Women have to be vain, but a man fancies that, like honest money, he ought to be taken for what he is worth, no matter how passe and battered he may appear.

Love is nature's dope with which we foolishly intoxicate ourselves when there is nothing else to do.

One ear of corn eaten from the cob is sometimes the best recipe for curing a man's grande passion.

Heaven must be something like a summer resort as far as the absence of men is concerned.

A man never discovers the value of money until he has acquired it, or of a woman's love until he has lost it.

Life, without love, is just lemonade without any sugar.

HUNDREDS AT PLAY

More Than 1,000 Children Give an Exhibition.

PARENTS ON THE PLAYGROUND

Witness Practicable Demonstration of What Children Can Do in Athletic Events—Girls Play Baseball and Make Some Humorous Moves on Diamond—Mrs. Binley's Work.

More than 1,000 children and almost as many parents enjoyed three hours' entertainment last evening at the Garfield Park playgrounds, the model institution of its kind in Washington.

Most interesting to the bystander, and more in accord with the idea of giving Washington children outdoor recreation after their winter's educational work, was the athletic exhibition, including team contests in indoor baseball played out of doors, volley ball, tether ball, croquet, and racing, many of the events being entered by both boys and girls.

Boys may be seen playing ball at all times, but to witness a struggle between girls' teams is a treat, especially when in the midst of one tiring all bases are temporarily abandoned in a mad stampede for high ground in order to "see the Wrights fly."

Ring games were participated in by the younger girls, and a feature of no mean interest was the folk dances, those given being symbolic of the customs of England, Germany, and America. Meanwhile, swings, slide boards, seesaws, the sand pile, and other amusements for the little folk were in no wise neglected.

The Industrial Feature.
There was a small exhibition of industrial work, a feature which only recently has been inaugurated, but which will be largely extended in future years. It includes basketry, embroidery, crochet, knitting, and other similar girls' handicrafts.

The purpose of the Playgrounds Association in exhibiting the work, was to obtain if possible, more intimate co-operation of parents, by demonstrating the inestimable advantages of the work over the former street play under which much mischief brewed from the inability of busy housekeepers to properly look after their children. No parent, with any reasonable amount of comprehension, could have witnessed the exhibition without noticing the close attention paid by the instructors to every game.

The umpires in the baseball and other games attended as strictly to business as if they were pronouncing the fate of some American League team. Mrs. Binley participated in every ring game, in the folk dances, and even was observed crawling on the ground with totos of three years in the "catapult" game.

Few of the onlookers realized the amount of time and money spent by Mrs. Binley in the study of the theory and practice of the various games, especially the last mentioned, which embodies the idea that, in view of the fact that the lower animals, the quadrupeds, carry themselves in a position to greatly aid the workings of the digestive organs, and that man, being bipedal, should give a part or our time each day to exercise on our hands and knees and similar positions in order to improve conditions likewise.

Mrs. Binley's Work.
The Garfield Park playground is under the superintendence of Mrs. M. Erskine Binley, who is ably assisted by Miss Jean Crawford. For years Mrs. Binley has been a prominent figure in Washington playground work, having had charge for some time of the playground of the Ludlow School, where her work attracted the attention of the board. She was sent to the Jamestown Exposition as the representative of the American Playgrounds Association. It is a work into which Mrs. Binley always has entered with heart and soul. At the inauguration of the "Tag Day" last year, and in its improved continuation in the Taft Button Day this year, she was tireless in her efforts, and boasted that "no friend of mine goes untagged," and she had a way of making intended victims her friends.
